Tips for Al Fresco Eating

There's nothing quite like eating outside to evoke that happy, carefree holiday mood, but with British weather so unpredictable we need to grab the opportunity when we can. Here are our five top tips for making sure you are ready to go 'al fresco'!

Check you have all the necessary equipment to hand. Stock up on charcoal and make sure the barbecue is in good condition and clean.

Invest in a proper picnic blanket with water-proof backing if you like sitting on the ground. Even grass that appears dry can create an uncomfortable damp patch, or leave an unsightly stain that may be difficult to remove.

Use plastic cups and crockery. Choose disposable ones if you want a really easy life, but reusable ones will ultimately save you money and are more eco-friendly.

Make sure your hands and utensils are thoroughly clean before cooking or serving food. If you are away from home, take along wet wipes or anti-bacterial hand-wash.

Thoroughly cook food that is to be barbecued and keep picnic food cool in a cool box or bag. Avoid food that will melt or spoil easily, like chocolate or bananas.

In addition, remember to sit in the shade if the weather is hot, and always slather on sun-protection.

So there you have it: the perfect recipe for a fun-filled outdoor dining experience. Bon appétit!
